

We are three artists and friends from The Grange in Edinburgh who decided to take a stab at opening up our studios after lockdown.

We always thought that there would be more like-minded people in our area beavering away on art and craft projects. And as we wanted to share our work and open up communications with artists and artisans, the seed of our open studio event was sown.

This past event in June this year saw our group becoming seven, with each of our members welcoming over 100 visitors. All of us who opened up our home studios reported that so many of our visitors welcomed and wanted to support our events. Many visitors signed up within individual studios to receive updates on their work and when the next event would be. We have also had a fair number of artists and makers asking to join our growing artistic community.

As this past event was only our third, we are delighted and somewhat overwhelmed that our little seedling is growing stronger each time we open our doors to visitors.
